RHODE ISLAND REGIONAL ACCESS POINTS

WHAT ARE THEY:

Regional Access Points (RAPs) are local, "one stop shops" where individuals and households experiencing homelessness can begin the process of accessing housing, supportive services, and emergency shelter. In addition, RAPs provide prevention and diversion support, such as employment navigation and connections to critical community resources.

WHY THEY MATTER:

RAPs make the housing and emergency shelter system easier to navigate by taking a person-centered approach—prioritizing each individual's unique needs, easing access to emergency shelter and services across the state, and connecting people more quickly to the right support. By addressing the most immediate needs through referrals to appropriate emergency shelter and housing related services, they ensure that help is tailored to the person, not just the process.

WHO THEY SERVE:

Individuals and families experiencing, or at risk of, homelessness.

HOW TO REACH A RAP:

You can reach a RAP by working with your case worker, visiting in person during the hours listed or calling the main number to schedule an appointment.

WHERE THEY ARE LOCATED:

RAPs are spread across Rhode Island so that everyone has a nearby option for housing help. Each location is designed to serve as a local front door into the statewide homeless response system.

RHODE ISLAND PUNTOS DE ACCESO REGIONAL

¿QUÉ SON?:

Los Puntos de Acceso Regional (PAR) son puntos de acceso locales donde las personas y familias sin hogar pueden iniciar el proceso de acceso a vivienda, servicios de apoyo y albergue de emergencia. Además, los Puntos de Acceso Regional ofrecen apoyo preventivo y desvío, así como orientación laboral y conexiones con recursos comunitarios esenciales.

POR QUÉ SON IMPORTANTES:

Los Puntos de Acceso Regional facilitan la navegación en el sistema de vivienda y albergues de emergencia al adoptar un enfoque centrado en la persona: priorizan las necesidades únicas de cada persona, facilitan el acceso a los albergues y servicios de emergencia en todo el estado y conectan a las personas con el apoyo adecuado más rápidamente. Al afrontar las necesidades más inmediatas mediante derivaciones a los albergues de emergencia y servicios relacionados con la vivienda, garantizan que la ayuda se adapte a la persona, no solo al proceso.

A QUIÉNES SIRVEN:

Personas y familias que se encuentran sin hogar o en riesgo de quedarse sin vivienda.

CÓMO COMUNICARSE CON UN PUNTO DE ACCESO REGIONAL:

Puede comunicarse con un Punto de Acceso Regional (PAR) trabajando con su trabajador social, visitándolo en persona durante el horario indicado o llamando al número principal para hacer una cita.

DÓNDE SE UBICAN:

Los Puntos de Acceso Regionales están distribuidos por todo Rhode Island para que todos tengan una opción cercana de ayuda con la vivienda. Cada ubicación está diseñada para servir como punto de acceso local al sistema estatal de respuesta para personas sin hogar.
